We lunch along the Tamir, where we can go for a swim before riding again.

In the late afternoon, we set up our camp on the banks of the river in order to water the horses and cool off.

In the evening, we have dinner and then collect some wood to get warmed up front of a bon fire.

Gradually, we gain altitude and cross the Mount Argalant behind which we can see away the possible snowy peaks. Then we pass by Ulaan Khad the "red rock."

After lunch, we hit the road in a faster pace. We go into a forest of larches perched on the hill called "the rich". The ascent is quite difficult and our pace slows down due to the high altitude. But we quickly reach back the plain and go down towards the hillside, before reaching a small river. Our camp will be set up on its bank.

Early in the afternoon, we leave Ondor-Ulaan at trot. Nomads are many in this area. We pass close to many yurts and see several herds of goats and yaks. After a few kilometers, we reach and drive along the road under construction connecting Moron to Ulan Bator, at the foot of Mount Zuun Mod. The vegetation is scarce and the soil, dry. We have lunch near the gorges of the Suman River and go down to the bed of the river where we can observe rocky paintings of ibex, horses and other animals.

Terkhiin Tsagaan national park 📍

Tariat - Terkhiin Tsagaan national park

- We wake up early for our last day horse riding in Arkhangai. We start riding along the track. The landscape changes as quickly as we approach the Khorgo Volcano. We ride on a very black and very difficult soil, made of dry lava. The landscape is original and doesn't look like anything we've seen so far. The vegetation around us is essentially made of high larches ; it formed on the lava rejected here more than 8000 years ago.

In the morning we reach the Khorgo volcano where we dismount and tie our horses to make the ascent of the summit, 2210 metres (1,37 mile) above the sea level.

After a few minutes of ascent, the view is already wonderful. We can already see the white lake. Here, the region is more touristic and once we get back downhill, we can taste local fruit juices sold in small stands. Around noon, we ride again following the track at a slow pace. We go to the cave of Zaluus and visit it before reaching Terkhiin Tsagaan Nuur, the "White Lake of the Terkh River", located 2060 meters (1,28 mile) above the sea level. It's the jewel of Arkhangai and one of the most beautiful lakes of the country.

Day 15

- After eight days of horse riding, let's relax with other activities : walking on the banks of the lake, swimming, visiting families or playing game cards. We take advantage of the comfort of the camp to get back into shape before hitting the road again towards Khövsgöl.
